MEMORANDUM OPINION¹

(June 3, 2019)

The Court has received Defendant Ngozika J. Nwaneri, M.D.’s justification for his removal as well as Plaintiff Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan, LLP’s motion to remand. Defendant is proceeding pro se in this action, as well as in the underlying case in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. See Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP v. Nwaneri, No. 2018 CA 003686 B (D.C. Super. Ct.). Upon consideration of the briefing,² the relevant legal authorities, and the record as a whole, the Court shall GRANT Plaintiff’s Motion to Remand, and shall REMAND this matter to D.C. Superior Court. For the

¹ The Court has edited the case caption for consistency with the parties’ latest filings, which reflect Plaintiff’s full name.

² The Court’s consideration has focused on the following documents:

- “Justification [sic] for Removal of Civial [sic] Action from DC Superior Court,” ECF No. 9, and Errata thereto, ECF No. 10 (collectively, “Def.’s Justification”);
- Mot. to Remand and Stmt. of P&A, ECF No. 12 (“Pl.’s Mem.”);
- Opp’n to Quinn Emanuel’s (QE) Mot. to Remand Civil Action No. 19-990(CKK) to DC Superior Court. [sic], ECF No. 14 (“Def.’s Opp’n”); and
- Pl. Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan, LLP’s Reply in Supp. of Its Mot. to Remand, ECF No. 15 (“Pl.’s Reply”).

In an exercise of its discretion, the Court finds that holding oral argument in this action would not be of assistance in rendering a decision. See Local Civil Rule 7(f).

trouble of litigating Defendant's improper removal, Plaintiff shall have an opportunity to submit its just costs and actual expenses, including attorney's fees, in D.C. Superior Court.

This case springs from a falling-out between a law firm (Plaintiff) and its client (Defendant) in a separate matter. Later an arbitral panel found that Defendant had not paid all of the attorney's fees and costs owed to Plaintiff for the prior representation. The panel awarded recovery to Plaintiff, which sought confirmation in D.C. Superior Court. That court confirmed the arbitral award and issued a further award of attorney's fees to Plaintiff for the confirmation proceedings. Defendant then tried to remove the case to this Court.

After Defendant filed his Notice of Removal, the Court issued its [5] Order requiring him to show cause why this case should not be remanded to D.C. Superior Court for failure to comply with the requirements for timely removal under 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b)(1). Plaintiff had filed the underlying D.C. Superior Court case on May 24, 2018, and the docket suggests service upon Defendant on May 24 or 25, 2018. Yet, Defendant did not attempt removal to this Court until April 8, 2019, long after the thirty-day time limit established by Section 1446(b)(1). Although Defendant appears to contest proper service of the Complaint, he cannot dispute that he received a copy of the Complaint, by one means or another, much more than thirty days before April 8, 2019. See Def.'s Justification at ECF p. 4. Accordingly, Defendant's Notice of Removal is not timely. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b)(1) (requiring, in pertinent part, the filing of notice of removal "within 30 days after the receipt by the defendant, through service or otherwise, of a copy of the initial pleading setting forth the claim for relief upon which such action or proceeding is based" (emphasis added)).

The Court turns to any applicable exceptions for a tardy notice of removal. Those apply only if the case was removable when it initially was filed. See, e.g., id. § 1446(b)(3), (c)(1); Order, ECF No. 5.³ Defendant erroneously invokes subject-matter jurisdiction under the Federal Arbitration Act, which is clearly not a valid basis for jurisdiction. “Although the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) constitutes federal law, ‘the Supreme Court has interpreted the statute as not itself bestowing jurisdiction on the federal district courts.’” Karsner v. Lothian, 532 F.3d 876, 882 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (quoting Kasap v. Folger Nolan Fleming & Douglas, Inc., 166 F.3d 1243, 1245-46 (D.C. Cir. 1999) (citing Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 U.S. 1, 16 n.9 (1984))). And Defendant has not identified any other federal law that purportedly supports federal-question jurisdiction.

As to timeliness specifically, Defendant cites a provision of the Federal Arbitration Act providing for removal “at any time before the trial” of a case that “relates to an arbitration agreement or award falling under the Convention” on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, also known as the New York Convention. Def.’s Justification at ECF pp. 2-3 (quoting 9 U.S.C. § 205) (internal quotation marks omitted); see also TermoRio S.A. E.S.P. v. Electranta S.P., 487 F.3d 928, 929, 933 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (noting that the Act implements the Convention). But, even if this portion of the Act applies, which the Court need not decide, Defendant could not rely on the Act to secure this Court’s jurisdiction. As Defendant acknowledges, the Act indicates that “[t]he procedure for removal of causes otherwise provided by law shall apply.” 9 U.S.C. § 205

³ The Court previously remarked that the case appeared to be removable when it was initially filed in D.C. Superior Court, in which case removal now would be untimely. Order, ECF No. 5, at 2. But, as the Court shall discuss, the briefing and the Court’s research make clear that the case was not removable when it was filed. Nor is it removable now.

(also articulating inapplicable exception). That procedure requires federal subject-matter jurisdiction in order to render the case originally removable. No such jurisdiction is available here, for the reasons described elsewhere in this Opinion.

Defendant also attempts to establish diversity jurisdiction, but he fails there as well. There is no dispute as to diversity of citizenship. He concedes, however, that “[t]here was no diversity jurisdiction based on the initial pleading because the actual amount in controversy was under $75,000.00.” Def.’s Justification at ECF p. 3. But he argues that the award of attorney’s fees to Plaintiff on March 7, 2019, for having to litigate the motion to confirm the arbitration award raised the amount in controversy above the threshold. Id. at ECF p. 4. Defendant’s belief that this later award of fees makes a jurisdictional difference is mistaken.

In an action to confirm an arbitral award, the prevailing “demand approach” to calculating the amount in controversy evaluates only “the amount [that Plaintiff] sought in the underlying arbitration rather than the amount awarded.” Karsner, 532 F.3d at 882-84 (citations omitted); see also Equitas Disability Advocates, LLC v. Daley, Debofsky & Bryant, P.C., 177 F. Supp. 3d 197, 204 (D.D.C. 2016), aff’d sub nom. Equitas Disability Advocates, LLC v. Feigenbaum, 672 F. App’x 13 (Mem.) (per curiam). Plaintiff sought an arbitration award consisting of attorney’s fees and costs generated during the representation of Defendant in a separate matter. Those fees and costs totaled $21,759.08. Decl. of Florentina Dragulescu in Supp. of Quinn Emanuel’s Mot. to Remand, ECF No. 12-1 (Final Award, Ex. 1, at 8, 9). Because that amount does not exceed the requisite $75,000, “exclusive of interest and costs” incurred in either the arbitral proceedings or in the D.C.

Superior Court proceedings in this case, the amount in controversy is not satisfied. 28

U.S.C. § 1332(a).

The Court entertains one further possibility regarding the demand approach, though removal is not proper on this basis either. Plaintiff's arbitration demand also sought "attorneys' fees and costs related to bringing [that arbitration] action and pursuing payment as a result of [Defendant's] conduct, as provided in the [parties'] Agreement, in an amount to be established at the hearing." Decl. of Florentina Dragulescu in Supp. of Quinn Emanuel's Reply in Supp. of Its Mot. to Remand, ECF No. 15-1, Ex. 1 (Claimant Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan, LLP's Demand for Arbitration, ECF No. 15-2, at 11). Plaintiff did not yet know, before the arbitration, the total value of those attorney's fees and costs. Even if, arguendo, the final value of the costs could be known then, in no instance would the costs be factored into calculation of the amount in controversy. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a) (expressly excluding costs). And the Court need not decide whether the final value of the attorney's fees for the arbitral proceedings could count towards the amount in controversy. Even assuming, arguendo, that the final value of those attorney's fees could count towards the amount in controversy—because Plaintiff generically requested attorney's fees in its arbitration demand—that total of $50,000 would be insufficient to satisfy the amount in controversy. Adding these fees to the $21,759.08 at issue would give only $71,759.08, below the $75,000 threshold under Section 1332(a).⁴

⁴ Defendant also urges under Section 1446(c)(2) that the Court may rely on his Notice of Removal for the amount in controversy. See Def.'s Opp'n at 14. But Defendant has not supplied authority for his assertion that this is a case where "State practice . . . permits recovery of damages in excess of the amount demanded." 28 U.S.C. § 1446(c)(2)(A)(ii). Even if this is such a case, the Court does not find the other requisite prong satisfied, because the Court does not "find[], by the preponderance of the evidence, that the amount

The Court also rejects Defendant's argument that the Court should consider attorney's fees awarded to Plaintiff for the proceedings in D.C. Superior Court. See, e.g., Def.'s Justification at ECF p. 4. Fees for state court litigation regarding confirmation of the arbitration award plainly fall outside of the demand approach, which evaluates only the amount sought during the arbitration itself.

Accordingly, the amount in controversy is not satisfied, and diversity jurisdiction fails. The Court concludes that it lacks subject-matter jurisdiction over this matter. Defendant's remaining arguments are unavailing.

Moreover, it should have been clear to Defendant that removal was not proper. Defendant has removed this case after a judge on the D.C. Superior Court confirmed an arbitration award against him and awarded attorney's fees for the proceeding. Defendant improperly urges this Court to review and/or re-do the state court proceedings. See Def.'s Justification at ECF p. 5 (asking this Court to, inter alia, "review all [of Defendant's] submissions, grant motion hearings that allow for oral arguments, evidence, testimony, and other measures that [a D.C. Superior Court judge] spelled out during [a] September 12, 2018 Hearing . . . when a roadmap was laid for a case resolution"). Defendant has not cited any authority for the notion that this federal trial court may review the proceedings of the state trial court in this matter. His efforts effectively to re-litigate in this Court proceedings before the D.C. Superior Court are therefore wholly inappropriate.

The sole issue remaining is whether Plaintiff should be allowed to recover "just costs and any actual expenses, including attorney fees, incurred as a result of the removal."

in controversy exceeds the amount specified in section 1332(a)." 28 U.S.C. § 1446(c)(2)(B). Rather, the amount of $71,759.08 falls short.

28 U.S.C. § 1447(c). Generally, no such costs or expenses are justified if Defendant had an “objectively reasonable basis” to notice the removal. Martin v. Franklin Capital Corp., 546 U.S. 132, 136, 141 (2005); see also id. at 138 (“Section 1447(c) authorizes courts to award costs and fees, but only when such an award is just.”). The threshold for objective reasonableness is rather low: Did Defendant’s grounds for removal contain “at least some logical and precedential force”? Knop v. Mackall, 645 F.3d 381, 383-84 (D.C. Cir. 2011). But the Court finds that even this low threshold is not satisfied, because the removal is neither logical nor supported by citation to any precedent.

In light of the resolution on the merits, already, of the underlying D.C. Superior Court proceeding,⁵ Defendant’s removal of this case was patently improper. There was no logical basis to believe that he could gain another bite at the apple in this Court. And despite precedent that cleanly disposes of Defendant’s jurisdictional arguments, Defendant has not cited a single case to distinguish that case law or otherwise to justify his removal. Although Defendant’s Justification cites statutory support for various of his arguments, that authority does not affect the Court’s conclusion that this case was not removable when it originally was filed, and has not become removable since then. Accordingly, in an exercise of its discretion, the Court shall require Defendant to pay Plaintiff’s just costs and actual expenses, including attorney’s fees, that Plaintiff incurred as a result of the improper removal. See McNeil v. United States, 508 U.S. 106, 113 (1993) “[W]e have never suggested that procedural rules in ordinary civil litigation should be interpreted so as to excuse mistakes by those who proceed without counsel.”). Although the Court has decided that costs and expenses are warranted, the Court shall leave a determination of that award to the state court hearing the remainder of these proceedings. See, e.g., Hodach v. Caremark RX, Inc., 374 F. Supp. 2d 1222, 1226 (N.D. Ga. 2005) (“find[ing] that litigating [the] case on dual tracks—the substantive issues in the Superior Court, and the ancillary costs and expenses issue in this Court—would be inefficient and would further delay the processing of the case”).

⁵ After confirmation of the arbitration award, as well as the award of attorney’s fees, Defendant filed various motions that were pending as of the filing of his notice of removal. None of those motions changes the Court’s assessment that a court of the D.C. Superior Court has already resolved this case on the merits, subject potentially to some changes if Defendant’s motions were—or, upon remand, are—granted.

For the foregoing reasons, the Court shall GRANT Plaintiff’s Motion to Remand, and shall REMAND this matter to D.C. Superior Court. Plaintiff shall submit an accounting of its just costs and actual expenses, including attorney’s fees, in D.C. Superior Court by no later than JULY 3, 2019, or such other time as the D.C. Superior Court judge administering the relevant proceedings may establish.

An appropriate Order accompanies this Memorandum Opinion.
